The rotational spectrum of cyanoformamide, NCONH$_2$, has been measured between 110 and 360 GHz using the FAAAST spectrometer. Since the stability of the molecule is rather limited, it was most convenient to measure its spectrum in a flow system. In this talk, we will report and discuss the extension of our previous measurements* and the assignments of rotational spectra arising from molecules in three vibrationally excited states in addition to the ground state.

---